BECOME AN OLIVE OIL EXPERT

Retired gemologist Sam Cremona has spent years researching and revitalizing Malta’s olive oil industry. His brainchild is the Project for the Revival of the Indigenous Maltese Olive (Primo), which, in just two years from now aims to have 10,000 trees producing the Bidnija olive. The painstaking grafting of cuttings from 2,000-yearold trees onto 6,000 rootstock imported from Bari has produced a genetic bank that now boasts trees planted in many groves on the island and allows Sam and Ministry of Agriculture colleagues to produce around 3,000 saplings a year. Sam will talk to your delegates about his hopes for the Project and the potential to market the Primo extra virgin olive oil as a health food specially indicated to strengthen and improve the immune system.

PRODUCE YOUR OWN OLIVE OIL

In this unforgettable team-building experience, delegates can pick olives and make their own olive oil. Located off the beaten-track, in the countryside of Malta, Wardija is home to the mythical-sounding white olive. Working together, delegates can discover Malta’s olive stock, some of which date back 2,000 years, in one of Sam Cremona’s rustling, birdsong-filled olive groves. Delegates will experience the whole process of olive pressing and experiment to find the perfect blend for their own unique olive oil. Lessons in olive tree grafting will also be on offer. For every ten participants there will be two tutors, with some theory before the practical sessions. Delegates can keep their saplings to plant and one day graft to produce more trees.

AND TRADITIONAL BREAD-MAKING

Learn how traditional bread is made in the ancient town of Qormi, known as ‘Casal Fornaro’, the bakers’ village, since Grand Master Antoine de Paule visited the bakeries in 1623. Today Qormi carries on the tradition as the centre of the Island’s baking industry. Vital for employment, but also a way to encourage the preservation of cultural heritage. Your delegates will have the opportunity to watch the bakers at their stone ovens, which still work by burning wooden logs. They can also indulge in some delicious crusty ‘hobza’, which has pure and sustaining qualities, made even tastier when sprinkled with sesame seeds. Traditionally, thick slices are rubbed with fresh tomatoes, dabbed slightly with olive oil and vinegar, and sprinkled with salt and freshly milled pepper.
